MORRISBY CAREER TESTING

This year, as part of our Pathway Planning Program, Guilford Young College is offering students the opportunity to complete extensive career testing. This testing is called the Morrisby Profile and is conducted by trained staff. The Morrisby Profile was developed in the UK and has been conducted for the past five years at GYC. It has received excellent reviews from parents and students, as they recognised the how insightful and helpful is the information contained in each individual’s Morrisby Report.

What is the Morrisby Test about?
The testing offers extensive insights into the student’s personality and strengths. The Morrisby Report identifies a range of suitable careers based on the results of the testing. The testing does not look at what the student has learnt, but what the student has the potential to achieve. However, students must have good literacy skills to benefit from this testing.

What does the Morrisby Test involve?
The testing starts with 30 minutes of career and personal interest questions. The testing will then involve 2.5 hours of multiple choice assessments; eight exercises looking at personal ability and four looking at personality. Students will be given a number of short breaks during the testing period.

What does it cost?
The cost of purchasing the testing material, sending the tests to the UK for processing and printing the bound reports is quite expensive. Career Advisors in the private sector charge up to $350 per person for the process. Guilford Young College has decided to charge $100 per student.
